

Love's All Greek to Me

Here's a show that will bring joy to your audience because

- It is filled with laughter and love
- The contemporary portion of the story will resonate with your audience
- This telling makes the ancient Greek myth both enjoyable and accessible

Photo by Stellar Exposures

We all learned bits of Greek mythology when we were in school. But how often have we ever had a chance to experience just how relevant a myth can be today?

This hour-long show is about parallel loves, told with words, music, and frolicking good humor.

It's about myth-adventures from the marriage of the ancient Greek god Eros and Psyche. These stories are woven together with contemporary adventures from the lifetime storyteller Lynn and her husband Bill have spent together.

To ask questions or to schedule a show, contact Lynn
 Cell phone: 757-642-6813
 Alternate phone: 757-625-6742
 Email: lynn@cascadingstories.com
 Website: www.cascadingstories.com

Marble statue of Eros and Psyche by Antonia Canova (1777)

Comments from audiences:

"After about the first paragraph of Mrs. Ruehlmann's story, I was hooked. Her words and facial expressions captured me. And then Peter began emphasizing the story on the Cello, making the story more dramatic. What a treat this turned out to be." —Betty Bailey,
 Warwick Forest Retirement Community

"This was the first time that we have attempted a fundraising event of this nature and it was a fantastic success. The ingenuity that it took to weave Greek Mythology into your own personal stories of love was uncanny. The flow was flawless and the presentation kept the crowd immensely engaged. The addition of the highly accomplished Peter Greydanus was a special treat with his timeless renditions of familiar musical selections and playful sound effects." —Leigh Anne Chambers
 Exec. Dir. , Rawls Museum Arts